Spiritual Notes:

Our first reading today paints an idealized picture of life in the early Jerusalem church. In the Acts of the Apostles, Luke shows us what life can be like among a community of believers open to the Holy Spirit. The example of the early church serves as a lesson for us. Luke stresses two things in his description of the community: they "bore witness to the resurrection," and they looked out for each other, "there were no needy persons among them." Our text calls us to be "of one heart and mind" as we strive to live out our faith. The reading from First John reinforces this message as it calls us to live our love for God by keeping "his commandments" which "are not burdensome." Our author reminds us that our faith in Jesus Christ is evidence that we are "begotten by God." And with God's help we are able to conquer the world and live as light in the midst of darkness. The battle between good and evil is not finished, but the outcome has been guaranteed. John's Gospel is originally thought to be ended with chapter 20. Its last two verses read like a conclusion. Our author tells us that "Jesus did many other signs in the presence of his disciples that are not written in this book." Looking at the other canonical Gospels, we find many other signs or miracles. In fact, in John 21 we have another collection of stories about Jesus, probably added to the text by a later editor. Our original evangelist tells us that the purpose of his text is to provide material to either inspire or reinforce faith so "that through this belief you may have life in his name." This dynamic of revelation leading to faith leading to salvation is found throughout John's text.

For reflection: How do I bear witness to the resurrection? What gospel stories in particular inspire my faith?

Notas Espirituales:

Nuestra primera lectura de hoy permite una representación idealizada de la vida en la Iglesia primitiva de Jerusalén. En los Hechos de los Apóstoles, Lucas nos muestra lo que puede ser la vida en una comunidad de creyentes abiertos al Espíritu Santo, el ejemplo de la iglesia primitiva sirve como una lección para nosotros. Lucas subraya dos cosas en su descripción de la comunidad: que "daban testimonio de la resurrección," y se cuidaron el uno al otro- "no había entre ellos ningún necesitado." Nuestro texto nos llama a ser "un solo corazón y mente," como nos esforzamos por vivir la fe.

La lectura de Primera de Juan refuerza este mensaje, ya que nos llama a vivir nuestro amor a Dios por mantener "sus mandamientos," que "no son gravosos." Nuestro autor nos recuerda que nuestra fe en Jesucristo es evidencia de que estamos "nacido de Dios." Y con la ayuda de Dios somos capaces de conquistar el mundo y vivimos como luz en medio de la oscuridad. La batalla entre el bien y el mal no está terminado, pero el resultado ha sido garantizada.

El Evangelio de Juan se pensó en un principio que ha terminado con el capítulo 20. Sus dos últimos versos leídos como una conclusión. Nuestro autor nos dice que "Jesús hizo muchas otras señales en presencia de sus discípulos, que no están escritas en este libro." En cuanto a los otros evangelios canónicos, nos encontramos con muchas otras señales o milagros. De hecho, en Juan 21 tenemos otra colección de historias acerca de Jesús, probablemente introducido en el texto por un editor posterior. Nuestro evangelista original nos dice que el propósito de su texto es proporcionar material a cualquiera de los dos inspirar o reforzar la fe por lo que "para que creyendo, tengáis vida en su nombre." Esta dinámica de la revelación que conduce a la fe que lleva a la salvación se encuentra en todo el texto de Juan.

Para reflexionar: ¿Cómo puedo dar testimonio de la resurrección? ¿Qué historias del evangelio en particular inspiran mi fe?
