Spiritual Notes:

The Book of Numbers narrates Israel's time in the wilderness. In today's reading, the Lord bestows "some of the spirit that was on Moses" on "the seventy elders." The Lord does this in response to Moses' complaint, "I cannot carry all this people by myself." Two of the 70 elders on the list "had been left in the camp" rather than going out to "the tent" (that is, the tabernacle) but even they received the spirit and "prophesied in the camp." The Lord continues to provide for the good of the people, despite their grumbling.

James sounds a word of warning to the rich: "weep and wail over your impending miseries." Their crime is that they hoard their wealth rather than providing for the poor. But like the rich fool in Jesus' parable, they will learn that earthly riches do not last. Gold and silver corrode and moths eat even the finest clothing. As we welcome Pope Francis to the United States this weekend, we are called to renew our concern for those who go without because of the greed of others. The cries of the poor "have reached the ears of the Lord of hosts." The exorcist "driving out demons in Jesus' name" serves as a reminder (echoing our first reading) that we cannot limit the spirit of God. "Whoever is not against us is for us, Jesus tells His disciples. He goes on to say that eternal life is worth whatever sacrifice we have to make; like the buried treasure or the pearl of great price that He speaks of elsewhere, even if we have to sacrifice a "hand" or a "foot" or an "eye," the kingdom of God is worth the price.

For reflection: Can I see the spirit of God at work in those who are the "seventy elders" of today's church? Do I make an effort to address the plight of the poor?

Notas Espirituales:

El Libro de los Números narra la época de Israel en el desierto. En la lectura de hoy el SEÑOR tomó "del espíritu que reposaba sobre Moisés" y se los dio a "los setenta ancianos." El Señor hace esto en respuesta a las quejas de Moisés, "No puedo llevar a todo este pueblo por mí mismo." Dos de los 70 ancianos en la lista se "habían quedado en el campamento" en vez de salir a "la carpa" (es decir, el tabernáculo), pero incluso ellos recibieron el espíritu y "profetizaron en el campamento." El Señor sigue ofreciendo para el bien de la gente, a pesar de su quejas.

Jacobo les dice una palabra de advertencia a los ricos: "llorarán y se lamentarán sobre sus miserias inminentes." Su delito es que acumulan su riqueza en lugar de ofrecer a los pobres. Pero al igual que el rico insensato en la parábola de Jesús, ellos aprenderán que las riquezas terrenales no duran. El oro y la plata se empañan, y la polilla se come incluso la más fina ropa. Mientras damos la bienvenida al Papa Francisco a los Estados Unidos este fin de semana, estamos llamados a renovar nuestra preocupación por los que van sin causa de la avaricia de los demás. Los gritos de los pobres "han llegado a los oídos del Señor de los ejércitos."

El exorcista "que expulsaba demonios en nombre (de Jesús)" sirve como un recordatorio (haciéndose eco de nuestra primera lectura) que no podemos limitar el espíritu de Dios. "El que no está contra nosotros, está por nosotros," Jesús dice a sus discípulos. Él va a decir que la vida eterna merece la pena a cualquier sacrificio que tenemos que hacer; como el tesoro enterrado o la perla de gran precio que se habla de otra parte, incluso si tenemos que sacrificar una "mano" o un "pie" o un "ojo," el reino de Dios merece el precio.

Para reflexionar: ¿Puedo ver el espíritu de Dios actuando en los "setenta ancianos" de la iglesia de hoy? Cómo puedo hacer un esfuerzo para hacer frente a la difícil situación de los pobres?
